Issue: Investigations have found that the second stage of the dual-stage airbag may be activated too soon after stage 1 in certain cases in a very specific, low speed front crash scenario (26 km/h, full frontal). This scenario was not properly accounted for in the airbag inflation parameters of the airbag control module.

Audi has decided that the affected vehicles may not fully comply with a section of FMVSS208/CMVSS 208, Occupant crash protection. During conformity-of-production testing using unbelted, out of position 6-year-old test dummies in the front passenger seating position, the dummy instrumentation recorded a "Normalized neck injury criteria" (Nij) of 1,01 in position 2 (dummy’s chest on the instrument panel) which slightly exceeds the permitted value of 1,00.

Although it is unsafe and strongly inadvisable for a child occupant to ride unsecured in the front passenger seat, a child in that position at the time of a crash necessitating air bag deployment may be subject to an increased risk of injury.
