Issue: The retention force of the seat belt tensioner on the front seats (driver and passenger side) in affected vehicles may not reach the intended level. The seat belt tensioner in the affected vehicles serve the purpose of holding the passenger in his position in the seat and this function is present. In the event of a crash, the retention force of the seat belt may not reach the intended level. As a result, the position of the body can be further to the front of the seat, which leads to a negative influence on the whole restraint system, increasing the risk of injury.
